From the Archives: Chinese Likenesses from San Francisco Portrait Studios

The California Historical Society holds a number of portraits of Chinese sitters at San Francisco photography galleries taken between the 1860s and the 1890s. Typically showing ordinary men staring directly into the lens, or women looking slightly off-camera, they provide a striking contrast to the many troubling images of Chinese people that were produced in early California.

Finished Harold and Kumar. Yes it is strangely more relevant now than when it was released. Happy ending was unrealistic considering that Black Lives Matter is still an issue.

About 2/3 of the way through Harold and Kumar Go to White Castle. Crude, vulgar, offensive, and a little out of date regarding its attitude to LGBTQ issues, for a film made in 2004, it is strangely current in its depiction of hatred for Asians and guilty of being Black. Maybe more when I finish it. Not for all audiences.
